Overview

Key Takeaways

The wholesale price of a 36-strand non-armored optical fiber cable typically ranges from $1. 50 to $3. 50 per meter, depending on fiber type, quality, and supplier.

Pricing OverviewNon-armored optical fiber cables are generally less expensive than armored variants because they lack the protective metal layer, making them suitable for indoor or conduit installations. For a 36-strand configuration, prices vary based on: Fiber type: Singlemode (OS2) cables are slightly more expensive than multimode (OM1, OM2, OM3, OM4) due to longer-distance performance. Cable length: Bulk reels (500m, 1000m) often reduce the per-meter cost.

Supplier and brand: Reputable manufacturers like Corning, AFL, and Mohawk may charge higher prices for guaranteed quality and performance.

Typical Wholesale Price Range

Multimode 36-strand non-armored cable: $1. 50–$2. 50 per meter.

Singlemode 36-strand non-armored cable: $2. 00–$3. 50 per meter.

Bulk orders may include discounts, especially for quantities exceeding several kilometers.

Additional Considerations

Connector type and jacket material: PVC, LSZH, or plenum-rated jackets can affect cost. Shipping and import fees: If sourcing internationally (e.g., Alibaba), factor in logistics costs. Supplier verification: Ensure the supplier provides datasheets and quality certifications to avoid performance issues.

For precise pricing, it is recommended to request a quote from suppliers such as CableWholesale, Fiber Savvy, or Alibaba, specifying the strand count, fiber type, and required length. This ensures accurate wholesale pricing tailored to your project needs.
